Introducing PageUp Applicant Tracking System

Tired of Technomedia? Meet PageUp, Rowan's new hiring tool. Rowan University is rolling out a new applicant tracking and hiring system this September that will replace Technomedia.

The new system, called PageUp, includes enhanced features that streamline the hiring process for prospective employees. One of the system's most appealing features is the automation of the request to hire, offer and onboarding processes.

PageUp improves the experience for job applicants as well by allowing them to check the status of an application and save an incomplete application to finish at a later time. The new system also allows applicants to upload files regardless of size.

The new system will go live on Thursday, Sept. 14th.

The Office of Human Resources will soon have training materials available on their website for employees who want to begin navigating the new system on their own. On-demand, recorded training videos will also be available on the Human Resources website in October.

For employees who would like to attend an in-person training session, Information Resources & Technology will be holding classes throughout September.
